

Perpetual Motion: Making Evaluation Matter

Jean A. King
University of Minnesota

What has remained constant

- Everyone's an evaluator
- Many are scared of evaluation
- Nothing has stayed the same

Developments that matter

- Technological innovation/growth
- The political use of evaluation coupled with an organic version of evaluation
- Our recognition of the fact that nothing will stay the same

Questions for me

1. What can we do to shape evaluation's future directions and developments?
2. How can we help evaluation serve those with the fewest resources for its formal conduct?

Shaping evaluation's future directions and developments

- Get political?
- Credential evaluators?

Helping evaluation serve those with the fewest resources

- Should we be Lady Di or Mother Teresa?
- Evaluation capacity building, but how?

Feel free to contact me at

kingx004@umn.edu